ELEONORA SEARS IS POISONED

Miss Eleonora Sears is entitled to the red badge if any girl is. With her face puffy and swollen by poison ivy and with her bright eyes nearly closed on account of the swelling, she goes about just the same, even to the extent of riding and driving at the Magnolia horse show.

Her girl friends of the horse show admitted that, if they were so poisoned, they would not show themselves in public, where they would be sure to be noticed and talked about.

But, scorning any criticisms of her appearance, Miss Sears not only attended the horse show, but joked about her own looks. She wore a broad-brimmed, soft felt hat. She might have pulled the brim down over her face. But she didn't. She wore the hat on the back of her head, so that every one might see just how swollen her features are.

Oh, Just Poison Ivy.

And she made fun of herself no end. At one time she was waiting outside the ring on Maurice Dimond's "Kentucky Model" to ride him in the thoroughbred hunter class. Henry Lee of Brookline walked up to her.

"Hello, Lee," said Miss Sears, calling him familiarly by his last name, "what do you think of my face?"

"It's a beauty," said Mr. Lee. "How'd you get it?"

"Oh, just a little poison ivy," said Miss Sears with a laugh. Then she rode along into the ring.

Later in the afternoon Miss Sears was walking on the beach. She was waiting for "Perfection" to be brought out to her to show him in the jumping class.

Along the beach came Police Sergeant. He is head gardener for Miss Sears' grandfather, T. Jefferson Coolidge. Clad in his working clothes, tan shoes and sweater jumper, Mr. Sargent was taking a few minutes to see what was going on. Miss Sears spied him and hailed him gaily, saying: "Hello, Hen!"

Enlightenment for "Hen."

"Why, Miss Sears," said the surprised gardner. "What in the world is the matter with your face?"

"Oh, nothing much, Hen—just a little poison ivy," said Miss Sears, passing along.

The gardner gave a little chuckle of appreciation of Miss Sears's indifference to what would cause most girls wails of anguish and mortification. He knew how little the prominent Boston society girl is affected by a little temporary blight upon her comeliness.

The natural question arose among Miss Sears' friends:

Will Harold Vanderbilt seen her with her face all swelled up?

It is well understood that young Mr. Vanderbilt is Miss Sears' most intimate friend among men, and that their engagement will be announced any day. Hence the query as to whether Mr. Vanderbilt had gazed upon Miss Sears in her present odd appearance.

Mr. Vanderbilt was not at the Magnolia horse show. So far as known he has not beheld Miss Sears as a victim of poison ivy, as she fell a victim to it only a day or so ago.

Next Sunday's issue of the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN will be a SPECIAL AVIATION NUMBER, edited by CLAUDE GRAHAME-WHITE, the famous aviator. It will tell when and how to see the airships and will contain the best pictures, best feature articles and best news of the meet to be found anywhere.

To-morrow, Saturday, the AMERICAN will issue an AVIATION SOUVENIR EDITION IN COLORS, to be on sale everywhere, containing the official programme and full details of the great aviation meet.

ATWOOD HAULED OUT OF POCKET

By FRED J. McISAAC.

NYACK, Aug. 25.—Atwood was carried 150 feet nearer his goal in New York shortly after noon, when twenty-four men pulled his machine that distance from the pocket into which he had been forced to land to a large field nearer the Hudson River.

With the goal of his long flight almost in sight, he is as unconcerned as though he were not going to win a fortune and destroy fame today by flying twenty-five miles down the Hudson to the city of New York.

The home stretch is the hilling time, but Atwood is taking it easy. He seems to be under no strain. He is supremely confident and yet is taking no chances.

All New York watched the sky yesterday

PROFESSOR HUTCHINS IS DEAD

William Street Hutchins died to-day at his home, No. 8 Bullfinch street.

Probably you think you never saw him; never even heard of him; and you likely wonder why his obituary notice is given such prominence.

But the chances are—particularly if you are a Bostonian and not of the growing generation—that you not only have seen him, but have heard him.

He was undoubtedly the best known "showman" of the old type in the country.

Maybe you will remember now: This same William Street Hutchins was the venerable "Prof." Hutchins, lecturer at Austin & Stone's Museum in Freeport row for more than a quarter of a century. Oh, certainly: of course, you place him now.

The professor had been ill two weeks. He was eighty years old and his death is attributed to a general breakdown. He was the oldest active showman in the country. His activities in the amusement world covered more than a half century.

Leaves Widow and Daughter.

When the museum closed five weeks ago he went home and complained of not feeling ill. He went to bed and never left it. He is survived by a widow, Mrs. Hutchins, and a daughter, Miss Julia Hutchins. It is expected that funeral services will be held Sunday. Interment will be in Mount Hope cemetery.

Professor Hutchins was conscious until the end and a few minutes before his death turned to his wife and daughter and said:

"I am going to die and the best friends I have in the world are in the graveyard. They have always treated me well and I want them to know I'm thinking of them gone."

Professor Hutchins was born on the lower East Side of New York. The Bowery was then in its glory, the Great White Way of the period. It was no wonder that the lad Hutchins should have his surroundings, his innate trend toward the stage speedily developed. His parents forced him to study law, but he abandoned that and joined Tyler's Tippy's dog and pony company, making his stage debut in the part of Sinbad in Northampton, Mass.

It was not until he had been an actor for two or three seasons that his marvelous mental gift for figure lingered in his attention, and P. T. Barnum, the prince of all showmen, engaged him for the celebrated Barnum's Museum in New York as "The Lightning Calculator."

Once in the museum line of amusements he never left it. The museums began to wane in public favor about fifteen years ago, but Professor Hutchins stuck. He came to Boston, became lecturer for Austin & Stone's, and it is not too much to say that Austin & Stone's lasting popularity as a form of diversion was due in prodigious measure to Professor Hutchins' quaint, quiet, inimitable style of describing the freaks and curios.

Interest Friend of Freaks.

For twenty-eight years he awed, enlightened and entertained hundreds of thousands of visitors at Boston's pioneer freak museum. Besides the curios, the platform have sat more two-headed girls, more dog-faced boys, more bearded ladies and wild men than biologists ever dreamed of dreaming about. In the same time that little platform has squirmed and squeaked and squabbled more "genuine" curiosities than the world." more "educated" pickaninnies, more "real" monkeys than ever lurked in untrodden jungles or coveted lore.

And because he kept his eyes open and his sympathies alert, bestowing on these extraordinary creatures the interest of less professional than paternal, Professor Hutchings was far more successful than the entire aggregation of the world's greatest fakirs. Though in a different way.

Of his wonderful ability as mental arithmetic, the Scientific American in 1886 when Professor Hutchins was a star entertainer at Barnum's Museum, said:

"One of the most amusing and astonishing exhibitions of mental power that we have ever seen is the addition of a row of figures by Professor William A. Hutchins, the mathematical phenomenon, having his attention drawn to seven rows of figures are entered upon a board, and on his return he picks up the chalk and giving it a whirl in the air, with sort of enthusiasm he announces the sum of the first column of figures, and so on rapidly.

"Another whirl of the hand and down goes the next figure, and thus the several columns are added, almost instantly, the operation swelling the wonder of the spectators. He also performs the reverse and the squaring of large numbers with marvellous quickness, setting down the result in a single row of figures. We have examined his process, and are satisfied that almost any of our intelligent accountants, who are pretty quick at figures, might learn to calculate with nearly the same rapidity."

BIG WATER CARNIVAL FOR GIRLS

Who is the best girl swimmer in New England now?

The AMERICAN will hold a champion-ship girls' amateur swimming contest Saturday afternoon, September 2.

The contest will be open to any amateur girl swimmer in New England.

The race will begin at 2 o'clock in the afternoon.

The course will be a three-mile one in the Charles river basin.

The trophy for the winner will be a magnificent silver cup, offered by the AMERICAN.

Entries will close next Thursday night, August 31, at 6 p. m.

Where to Send Entries.

Send entries to Swimming Editor, Boston AMERICAN, 82 Summer street.

More details of the contest will be announced. Watch the Daily and Sunday AMERICAN for announcements as to exact course, the officials and other news of the great championship swimming contest for New England girls.

This will be the greatest swimming meet for girls New England ever knew.

The AMERICAN has given prizes for and has managed several other girls swimming matches. They have all been successful. Winners of them have become famous swimmers. A notable instance is that of Miss Rose Fitzgerald, who won the AMERICAN'S medal at Revere Park, and who is now a vaudeville star of international fame.

Miss Mary McCullough won another race. The Berlin girls of the famous swimming family of that name, were prize winners in some of the AMERICAN'S races.

There is a constantly increasing interest in girl swimmers in this city, which produces some of the most expert feminine natators in the world.

Many Boston Mermaids.

It is doubtful if any city in the country, not excepting New York, can assemble as many accomplished girl swimmers from all classes of life as Boston can. The many beaches and the many advantages offered for devotees of the sport make Boston particularly favorable for girl swimmers. As for speed swimming in Boston, there is no legion.

So there is plenty of material on hand for a splendid swimming match. Making the contest open to girls of New England adds numbers and interest. The girls of other cities will have a chance to see what they can do against Boston mermaids.

The race will be carefully and fairly handled, so that every swimmer will get full chance to show what she can do.

The course will be thoroughly guarded. Competent officials will be in charge, as far as starting, judging and timing the race is concerned.

The Charles River Basin is a splendid place for a match of this kind. It has never been used for a swimming match, at least not since the basin came under control of the Metropolitan Water and Sewerage Board.

Room for All Spectators.

There is room for thousands and thousands of spectators along the classic street of Boston's pleasure basin. Boat clubs without end will run their launches down to the course and will men than biologists ever dreamed of dreaming about. It is a safe guess that little platform has squirmed and squeaked and squabbled more "genuine" curiosities than the world." more "educated" pickaninnies, more "real" monkeys than ever lurked in untrodden jungles or coveted lore.

And because he kept his eyes open and his sympathies alert, bestowing on these extraordinary creatures the interest of less professional than paternal, Professor Hutchings was far more successful than the entire aggregation of the world's greatest fakirs. Though in a different way.

SECRETARY FISHER CAUGHT IN STORM

CORDOVA, Alaska, Aug. 25.—Secretary of the Interior Fisher and his party were caught in a terrific storm that is sweeping Controller Bay, and made a landing at Point Pelot at the mouth of the Bering River. It is believed they are safe there, although they may have decided to climb over the hills to Katalla, five miles away.

Mrs. Costello, Eloping Heiress

Mrs. Costello, who was Miss Sadie Stewart of Covington, Ky., eloped with Charles L. Costello of Brookline, being married in Middleboro. They are now awaiting forgiveness of the bride's mother.

ELOPERS GO TO GIRL'S MOTHER

"Charlie" Costello of Brookline and South Carver and his bride, formerly Miss Sadie Stewart of Covington, Ky., who eloped and were married at Middleboro yesterday, left this city at 2 o'clock this afternoon for Covington. They are going to meet the bride's mother and to receive from her, as they fully expect, forgiveness for their marrying without her information or consent. The bride is worth $2,000,000.

"We are sure it will be all right with Sadie's mother," said young Mr. Costello this noon. "I know Mrs. Stewart well and we are good friends. Only she thought Sadie too young to marry yet.

"I'd like to straighten out one thing right here. That is the way the papers reversed our ages. I am twenty-one and Sadie is only nineteen, not the other way around.

"I'd like that corrected, because Sadie naturally doesn't wish to be represented as any older than she is and as long as I am of age I would like to have it said so. You see, I did not have to have my mother's consent to marry, though mother was willing and indicated perfectly that we were to wed

The Easiest Way.

"Why did we elope? Well, an engagement marriage is the easiest way for one thing. It's ever so much better than a big formal wedding. Some like a big wedding, but so far as I go there's 'nothing to it,' as they say.

"Besides, Sadie's mother was not willing for her to get married, you know. She kept Sadie abroad last Summer instead of letting her come home to visit my mother and me in South Carver. And she was going to locate Sadie next year in California. But when Sadie came home from abroad I met her in Montreal. She came to our home and we were soon to fix up an elopement without trouble.

"The papers speak a good deal about Sadie being wealthy. It might look so from a financial standpoint. But I was in love with her before I knew she had a nickel.

"For that matter, I have enough money of my own to live on without working. But I'm not going to live around and do

BEATTIE WINS FIRST CLASH

CHESTERFIELD COUNTY COURT HOUSE, Va., Aug. 25.—The defense to the trial of Henry Clay Beattie, Jr., for the murder of his wife, won a victory today when Judge Watson upheld its contention by admitting as evidence the "Dear Kid" letter which the defendant wrote to Bessie Binford before Mrs. Beattie's death and to which he endorsed money with which the girl might buy furniture for a flat.

The State had relied upon this letter as its first step in showing a motive for the murder, that Beattie wished to be rid of his wife that he might pursue his liaison with the Binford girl.

The defense was plainly elated over the decision of Judge Watson. After ruling was made on the point that Beattie had indited the letter at the coroner's inquest and that admissions made by the defendant should not be used to put him in danger of the electric chair.

Indictment Stands.

The motion by the defense yesterday to have the indictment against Beattie quashed on the grounds that the indictment throughout described it as "a wound upon the face," and not the fatal one it was taken up. Hill Carter argued that distinction. Morgan and Loving yesterday testified that a wound of the character described did not penetrate the face, and could not have caused death, and therefore the indictment was at fault. The court overruled the motion, and the indictment stands.

The story of how Beattie was tracked on the night of the murder was told by Detective Farrell. Farrell told how he accompanied Beattie back to the scene of the murder, and related how Beattie had pointed out to him the exact spot where his wife was killed. What was thought by as an important point in favor of the commonwealth developed when Farrell declared that the accused man showed not the slightest trace of fear.

He was a strong witness for the State in every way, and on cross-examination Farrell and Attorney Loving had a number of heated clashes.

Beattie will take the stand in his own behalf tomorrow, and will tell his story as a last resort to save himself from the death chair.

This was announced to-day by Harry M. Smith, Jr., for the defense. "We are in the position of gamesters throwing an ace to bull-2," said Mr. Smith, "and we

TWO DEAD, 2 DYING IN NEWBURY

Two men are dead, two others fatally injured and a score or more badly hurt as the result of an explosion shortly after 10 a. m. to-day in the mine of the Ernest Developing Company at Newbury, Mass. The dead:

George T. Harthorn, 48 years old, of Newbury.

Daniel Spannes of Boston.

The fatally injured:

——— Curcas, whose first name could not be learned.

Alex Bixby of Lynn, known thirty feet in the air.

Seriously injured:

INSKEMAN ANTON BUCK, 40, of Boston.

WILLIAM AYER of Lynn.

The report of the explosion could be heard for miles around. The mine was owned last Monday.

Neighboring houses felt the shocks. Glass was shivered from windows. Foundations of buildings were weakened in some places.

Victims Miners.

The shaft was an old silver mine and a charge of dynamite that had been left in the mine since it was worked by its former owners more than a score of years ago was what exploded.

The men killed were miners, who were engaged to reopen the mine by the development company when they took possession this week.

One of the two men who were killed was working in the mine with a pick when the point of the steel tool struck the old charge of dynamite.

A deafening blast followed and the four men who were close by to the pit were blown in the air and fell thirty or forty feet away.

Harry Woodward, one of the officers of the Developing Company, in an interview with a reporter for the AMERICAN, said:

Men Testing Ore.

"The men were engaged in loading dynamite in a hole to test some of the ore in the mine and it blew off. The cap which was to explode the dynamite did not work and some of the men, I believe, a Swede, I understand, struck the cap with a pick.

"When the explosion occurred more than twenty men were standing outside the mine. They came to the mine to look over the ore with a view to investing some of their money. The force of the explosion threw them off their feet, several being stunned so much that they had to receive medical attendance."

The old silver mine here was first worked in the early 70's, and for a time silver was taken from it by paying quantities, but the vein was broken and soon gave out. Many attempts have been made to reinvigorate the "pay dirt" but they have been unsuccessful.

Recently Harry Woodward of Lynn formed the Woodward Production Company for the purpose of testing whether or not the low grade ores which abound in this vicinity could be made to pay a profit if mined and smelted by modern methods.

MISS ROSE FITZGERALD'S OWN STORY OF HER TRAVELS IN EUROPE

THE AMERICAN will publish next Sunday, August 27, one of the most entertaining and instructive narratives of travels that it has ever had the pleasure of offering to New England readers.

This narrative is Miss Rose Fitzgerald's own account of her travels abroad with her father, Mayor Fitzgerald, with her sister, Miss Agnes Fitzgerald, and with the members of the Boston Chamber of Commerce party.

This story is based upon the diary Miss Fitzgerald kept on her tour. It is entertaining because it presents the viewpoint of a bright, observing Boston girl who travelled under unusual advantages for sightseeing.

It is instructive, for it touches cleverly upon foreign people, their customs, pleasures, cities and lives in general, so far as the length of the narrative permits.

Miss Fitzgerald is thorough mistress of the art of seeing, also she has a gift for description. Her story is no dry itinerary of one place after another, but is a delightful combination of travel, anecdote and amusement.

It will be particularly interesting to girls and young women. They will like to read about the dances, the dinners, the parties and other good times the Mayor's daughters enjoyed, as well as about the wonderful travels.

LYNN TEACHER TO WED DOCTOR

A fifth wedding romance is to be put on Cupid's ensemble in Lynn. It was announced today that on September 2 Miss Sarah E. Pool, one of the most popular of Lynn school teachers, will become the bride of Dr. Edward T. Shafts of No. 15 Mall street, who is well known here.

The Western district physician.

The wedding will take place at the home of Dr. Shafts's parents in Exeter, N. H., and will be performed by the Rev. Fuller Brown of that city. Miss Pool is a Presbyterian, and as the ceremony will take place out of the Mary Baker G. Lynn, where he is a communicant, Dr. Shafts has selected a Presbyterian minister.

They will motor from Lynn to Exeter on September 2, as Dr. Shafts says that the wedding will be private. Miss Pool will be given in marriage by her father, Sterling H. Pool, Esq. She is the daughter of the late H. J. Pool, who was a prominent figure in the English High school in the early days. She is a graduate of the Lynn English High and Salem College.

Miss Pool has talents and musical ability as a linguist, speaking several languages fluently. She has been a teacher in the Mary Gibbs boarding seminary at Ashland, and for the past two years has been teaching in the Lynn High school. Her home is at No. 72 Johnson street.

Dr. Shafts is a graduate of Tufts college and of Lynn's leading physicians. He has been a resident of Lynn for many years.

CLARK PREDICTS GREAT VICTORY

CHICAGO, Aug. 25.—Champ Clark, Speaker of the House of Representatives in an interview here declared that he elected this day in 1912 there will be two Democratic presidents and no Republican.

He foretold the approach of a great national prosperity that will triumph over the plans of the Democratic and the political machinations to endure a financial "panic" and, in discussing the constructive activities of the Democratic party, he predicted the passage by the United States Senate, the purging of Congress and a general overhauling outside of the tariff were a part of the Speaker's program for the present session that will come as a result of the Democratic ruralization.

The Speaker outlined emphatically his intention of not only pushing a strong tariff bill, but also of introducing a measure which would afford his message of hope to the American people.

The Democratic victories for 1912, he said, are not to be attributed to what has been made by the Democrats in Congress, especially in the House, but to the fact that a thousands of the Republicans did it not been for the announcement of the Democratic party that it would revise the tariff there would have been no Democratic victories.

Won on the Record.

By reason of that record and for no other reason, he elected a Democratic House and replaced Governors with Democrats. Every one of these Senators and Governors owes his seat to the record made by the Democratic members of the sixty-second Congress.

And because the voters of the country have returned to trust the party whose Democratic party we are destined to make a long-lasting election. If the Democrats do not keep faith with the people they will be held responsible for the general result is bound to be more than satisfactory, assured Speaker Clark in speaking of the record made by the Democrats in Congress.

Can't Fool the People.

At present, signs of a return to normal times are passing through the country as a result of the downward trend of stocks. But I don't believe the people can be fooled into thinking that the tariff question is not pending. It is too easy to perceive why the apparent fluctuations of industrial business have been manufactured.

The men who speculate in the markets are trying to frighten Congress and bring the people forcing a serious condition of stagnation. The interests, made desperate by the prospects of tariff revision and strict law enforcement, have resorted to this unpatriotic tactic in the hope that the progressive movement.

"The country is in no actual danger. The gambling in the stock exchanges and boards of trade has no more to do with legitimate business than has the game of monte. And legitimate business is safe.

"The overshadowing issue during the approaching campaign, of course, will be the tariff. The people have come to be restless and inclined downward. When we get to put on a strict revenue basis we will be ready to quit and not before.

"If Canada can ever fight, we are going to have reciprocity, and reciprocity with the northern country would be one of the most beneficial things for this country as a whole that could possibly happen. I am proud that it was the Democrats who made such a trade agreement possible.

Senatorial Elections.

"Another thing that makes me feel cheerful when I consider the future of this country is the immediate prospect of electing our Senators by popular choice. There is not the slightest doubt in the mind of the constitutional amendment, providing for the direct election of Senators will be passed and ratified. And the Democrats can take the credit of bringing about this much needed bit of legislation. I don't believe the new amendment will be a seriously regard for all our ills, but it will certainly be a most beneficial to the country.

"And while I am here in Chicago I should like to talk about your election next. I believe implicitly in air traveling for the ordinary tourist some day. I admire the pioneers of the air. And I should also like to speak a word for Darius Green, who had the first recorded trouble from a flying machine. I should like to see a public monument erected to the memory of this intrepid aviator.

"Aviation, in a way, reminds me of the progress of the Democratic party. The Democrats are producing results and so are the Democrats.

"Do you consider Mr. Roosevelt a sort of Darius Green, Jr.?" the Speaker was asked.

"Well, they both propelled themselves similarly," said Mr. Clark, "but Roosevelt is not quite as dead as Green. However, he's a dead Presidential possibility, if that's what you mean."

BALTIMORE MAY GET DEMOCRATS' SESSION

BALTIMORE, Md., Aug. 25.—The Democratic National Convention of 1912 will positively go to Baltimore, according to a statement in Washington today by a members of the national committee who has made a canvass of the situation. That Baltimore through her activity has secured the pledging of a sufficient number of votes to land the convention is his emphatic assurance. Based upon his inquiry in an effort to get the convention for his own city, Minneapolis and St. Paul, unite in their efforts to get the big gathering of Democrats, have withdrawn from the fight, he said, after a secret inquiry had shown them Baltimore's ascendancy of success. Louisville, another strong contender, may also withdraw.

GRAND-DAUGHTER OF JEFFERSON TO WED

NEW YORK, Aug. 25.—The marriage of Miss Cornelia Frances Jefferson, granddaughter of the late Joseph Jefferson, the actor, and Carrington Howard, son of Mr. and Mrs. John R. Howard of Montclair, will take place September 9, it was announced today. Miss Jefferson went on the stage at the age of sixteen and toured the United States with her father, Thomas Jefferson.

REJECTED SUITOR'S MOB ATTACKS RIVAL

LAWRENCE, Aug. 25.—The police are searching today for several men who assaulted Michael George of this city, who came here from New York to arrange for his marriage to Miss Wadel Kanaubbe. George claims he was attacked by a gang of different men who were led by a rejected suitor of Miss Kanaubbe. George was kicked into insensibility and was robbed of a watch and $17.00.

ELIOT SCHOOL CLUB PLANS ANNUAL BALL

The Eliot School Graduates' Club will hold its third annual ball on Monday evening, October 9, in Roughan Hall, Charlestown. The feature will be an electrical grand march conducted by twenty-four couples. The following is the committee in charge: Doubble La Cerra, chairman; Anthony Lanzilla, treasurer; Frank Forte, secretary; John Sousa, Harry Small, Charles Valerdo, Frank Gavigilio, Paul Perotti and Joseph Lanzilla.

GRAHAME-WHITE TO EDIT THE AMERICAN AVIATION NUMBER

CLAUDE GRAHAME-WHITE

The issue of the Sunday AMERICAN next Sunday, August 27, will be a special AVIATION Number, edited by Claude Grahame-White.

Mr. Grahame-White is the famous English aviator who was the brilliant star of the Harvard aviation meet at Squantum last year, and who has come over to the country to participate in the second meet at Squantum, which begins tomorrow.

Before dismiss the navy Englishman immensely. He showed himself a true sportsman of the old sort, valuing many flights, winning the majority of the prizes and the money and making the only flight to Boston Light and return.

His expert knowledge of the flying game qualifies him particularly to handle aviation subjects. Be sure to get the Sunday AMERICAN next Sunday for the special AVIATION Number edited by Mr. Grahame-White. It will contain the best feature articles, best photographs and best information concerning the meet and how to see it.

GRAFT INQUIRY AT WORCESTER

WORCESTER, Aug. 25.—Henry W. Hayes, state engineer of grade crossings on a salary of $3,000 a year, will come here next Monday to be questioned by a special investigating committee of the City Council in regard to the alleged graft in connection with the construction work on the $500,000 grade crossing elimination for the new union depot.

The investigation of this alleged graft has been pressed vigorously since it was exposed in the Sunday AMERICAN. Citizens of Worcester are aroused, especially as the city is liable for 10 per cent. of the cost of the work. The State is liable for 25 per cent.

The investigating committee demanded that Mr. Hayes come before them, as he is paid for inspecting this work in his capacity of State engineer. President Brooks of the Board of Aldermen wrote to Mr. Hayes to appear before the committee. A meeting was set for this time. Before the hearing began President Brooks announced that Mr. Hayes had agreed to come here Monday.

ATWOOD NEEDS HELP OF WIND

afternoon, but he did not come. He preferred to land at Nyack and postpone his triumph rather than take the slightest risk of losing it.

The Atwood aeroplane with its Marblehead, Mass., trade mark plain upon it lay nearly all day in a field at the foot of Hook mountain, about a mile and a half out of the town of Nyack. All the citizens of Nyack went out and looked it over and lots of them insisted upon shaking hands with the aviator who stuck close to his machine.

To be sure, he motored down to New York to get some parts for his machine, for he didn't waste a minute in the big city, but was back at Davies Field within an hour and a half of his departure.

In the afternoon it rained very hard, but it didn't scare the visitors away nor bother Atwood. The flyer simply grinned at the soaked sightseers from his perch in the aeroplane where he was sheltered by the canvas plane from the heavy downpour.

What's the matter with my limousine?" scoffed to the crowd.

Atwood doesn't look like a mechanician, any like a man who has broken a world's record and been under a terrible strain for ten days in succession. He looks keen, alert and unperturbed. His eyes are bright, and he smiles as gaily as though nothing worried him. In his neat brown suit, a la Harvard, and with his cane, he evidently has time to look after his personal appearance, and keep clean, anyway.

"I don't think I shall fly to Boston from New York," he told the Boston AMERICAN reporter. "I could do it, of course, for the flight has not bothered me a bit. But I am going to work at the aviation meet in Boston next week, and in justice to that I think I ought to arrive fresh. I shall go to Boston by train and rest up.

"I was interviewed in New York by afternoon papers. A big headline caught my eye.

"'Atwood flies at eighty miles an hour.' 'Do you mean to say I actually flew eighty miles an hour between those points?' he exclaimed.

"Well, we timed you," he was assured by several newspaper men.

"Well it seems unbelievable. I didn't know how fast I was going. I thought perhaps fifty or sixty miles, but I never imagined I was getting eighty out of the old machine."

Souvenir Fiends Busy.

The machine to which he referred affectionately as old, shows more signs than Atwood of the long journey. It seems that everywhere it alighted the cranks of the different villages succeeding in scratching on the wings or writing their names with ink or lead pencil. This work has always been done when Atwood and his friends were not looking, but the fact that planes are almost covered with the signatures of people from villages between St. Louis and New York.

"The signature fiends are bad enough," said Atwood, "but the souvenir fiends are absolutely dangerous. Why, if I wasn't on the watch those people would walk off with the whole aeroplane chopped into small pieces. I have had some of the most amusing and aggravating experiences with the country people along the route I can tell you.

"This trip hasn't bothered me because I have been good care of myself and not tried to make the whole journey on one flight. I could have flown twice or three times as far on many days than I actually did, but I was very careful not to do that. I never forget I've plenty of time. That's why I am coming down the Hudson leisurely. Remember the old story of the hare and the tortoise. The hare got tired and asleep and the tortoise won. I'd hate to fall asleep in my aeroplane. I am the tortoise but not slow, either."

getting ready to move

from 412 Washington St. to 30 Boylston St.

This is just to tell you that we are brushing off the dust from the "Sphinx," getting it ready for moving day.

When "The Sphinx" moves, it is right that the men of Boston should know about it. For ten years The Sphinx Hat Shop has been doing a successful business at 412 Washington Street, and has made a great many friends for our hats.

A couple of years ago the Mallory $3.00 hat was introduced in Boston through The Sphinx Hat Shop and it has been a pronounced success from the start. Mallory Hats, as you know, are Cravenetted, giving them longer life and protecting them from all kinds of weather.

We shall be pleased to welcome our friends at our new location, No. 30 Boylston Street, where we will be better equipped to serve you, as we will have more room and a larger stock of the season's latest hat styles in Derbies and Soft Hats for your selection.

G. A. R. ELECTS TRIMBLE CHIEF

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Aug. 25.—Judge Harvey Trimble of Princeton, Ill., was unanimously elected national commander-in-chief of the G. A. R. at today's meeting of the national encampment. Colonel John McElroy of Washington, D. C., the only other contestant for the place, withdrew from the race.

The circulation of the AMERICAN is 300,000 more than its next highest competitor and 100,000 more than all the other evening papers of Boston combined.

Anti-Jewish Riots in Wales Keep Up.

CARDIFF—Race rioting against Jews broke out with redoubled fury in the valleys of southern Wales today. Shops owned by Jews were pillaged and burned, and the police who attempted to protect private property were driven off by the mobs. In the Giffaith district many were injured in fighting between police and rioters. Mobs tore the doors and shutters from two shops and looted them. When the police tried to dislodge the vandals a fierce battle ensued. At Senghenydd mobs battled two shops after they had looted them. Many Jews are leaving the district in fear of their lives.

Thirty Rescued at Sea.

PERIM—The British steamer Warwickshire, passing here today, signaled that all of the thirty passengers and crew who were missing from the steamer Fireshire after she was wrecked at the entrance to the Gulf of Aden two weeks ago have been rescued.

NO MORE WAR, SAYS EDISON

AIX-LES-BAINS, France, Aug. 25.—Thomas A. Edison confidently prophesied today that there will be no more wars. Incidentally Edison expressed the opinion that the airship is a deadly factor in war.

"If Europe will only again indulge in international conflict, for she has learned her lessons from the economic disasters of wars," said Edison. "Germany will never again face what it cost her to march up to but not through the Arc de Triomphe in Paris.

"One day has passed when millions of lives can be sacrificed to foolish military ideas. The education of the last ten years has caused individual common sense to revolt against war. When European Cabinets talk of war they calculate without their host. As things are today the terribly deadly effects of inventions to be used in war are such that no country can afford to wipe out the humanity of another, if only for reciprocal, industrial reasons. This fact alone will cause the nations to arbitrate rather than to take the extreme measure of settling disputes by shedding blood.

"A nitroglycerine bomb dropped from one of our modern airships will do more damage than whole days of fighting did in Napoleon's time.

"In other words, invention has got beyond the thirst of blood; the power of science, that has been let loose, must overwhelm aggressive diplomacy."

Edison goes to Geneva today. He will pass three days making motor trips in the neighborhood and his auto has been Geneva makes of its water power.

Edison Admires the Wine Region of France—Well He May

If This Country Could Abolish Whiskey and Use Only Natural Wines and Light Beer the Drink Problem Would Be Solved

Copyright, 1911, by American Journal Examiner

Thomas A. Edison, travelling in France, speaks with admiration of the vineyards.

The French people have reason to admire and love those vineyards. They have represented real temperance for centuries. They have built up strong, sober, intelligent men.

It is to those vineyards that France owes the blood of the Gauls. Travelling toward the southwest in their great migration, the Gauls came to the vineyards and stopped. They decided to stay where that red wine was grown.

If Americans would give up the cursed whiskey, which is a drug and not a drink, if they would substitute the natural wines that this country can produce in quantities unlimited, and the light beers, of which the brewing has been brought to so great perfection in America, there would be no serious drink problem in this country.

Whiskey, gin, brandy and the other poisons should be controlled by law, as morphine and opium and the other drugs are controlled.

Natural wines and beers do not lead to drunkenness. On the contrary, used exclusively, they take the place of alcoholic poisons and produce a temperate people.

For the man who works with his muscles, who requires a great deal of liquid, whose liver is necessarily active, light beer is the ideal drink.

Liebig, the great chemist, said truly that beer and bread are the food of the workingman.

For the sedentary man, whose work is confining, and who gets little exercise, light wines—preferably the red wines containing no more than eight per cent. of alcohol and used in moderation—are the ideal food and stimulant combined.

Some time in the future this will be a sober country. In that day common sense and law will have stopped the use of whiskey and the other alcoholic drugs.

The consumption of beer will be practically universal among the working people, and the use and production of light red wines greatly increased.

Red wine contains the tannin absolutely required by our system of veins and arteries.

It contains to a greater degree than any other food product, and in a form most easily assimilated, IRON, essential element in the blood.

Red wine supplies the acid necessary to health.

And red wine is a great and natural disinfectant of the system—a destroyer of disease germs. The germ of typhoid cannot live in a weak solution of red wine and water. And red wine should usually be drunk in that way, one-third wine and two-thirds water.

It is a fact which prohibitionists will seek in vain to contradict, that drunkenness is practically unknown among those that use light wines and light beers exclusively.

The French nation to-day is the most temperate nation in the world, and it is absolutely temperate where the curse of strong alcoholic drinks has not been introduced. As long as the French had a heavy tax on the sale of spirits and no tax on the sale of light wines and beers, drunkenness in France was practically unknown. The removal of tax from spirits proved to be a curse—one that the intelligent French will soon remedy.

If this country would put a tax of ten dollars a bottle on alcoholic drinks containing more than ten per cent. of alcohol, and put no tax at all, in the shape of license or otherwise, on the exclusive sale of light wines and light beers, there would be no more drink problem in the United States in ten years. And this will come.

There is just as much difference between a natural red wine or beer and the whiskey that produces insanity as there is between a cup of coffee and the poisonous extract of coffee, caffein, which kills instantly.

There is as much difference between whiskey and light wine or beer as there is between opium and tobacco.

If the Chinese could stop smoking opium and use tobacco instead, the change might not be ideal from the viewpoint of the dreamer, but it would settle the Chinese opium problem.

If Americans could be compelled by law or argument to substitute light wines and beer for whiskey, the drink problem would be solved.

Those who have acquired the drink habit, however, whose systems are poisoned with alcohol, must not delude themselves with the notion that they can give up whiskey and substitute some milder alcoholic drink.

In ninety-nine cases out of a hundred that is impossible, and the milder drink simply leads back to the whiskey. For the habitual or occasional drunkard total abstinence for many years is the only safe remedy.

But the country cannot be run for the sake of a few habitual drunkards by well-meaning, praiseworthy prohibition men and women ignorant of the problem with which they are dealing.

And common sense and law should oppose the drinks that are drugs—whiskey, gins, et cetera—and intelligently encourage the sale, under pleasant, decent surroundings, of harmless drinks that lead to sobriety, health and morality.

LETTERS FROM AMERICAN READERS

TRUE FRIENDSHIP

Editor AMERICAN:

I am inclined to entertain the same doubts as regards the existence of true friendship between human beings at the present day, as Mr. Kingsley expresses in his letter—published with your reply in the editorial column. I think, as he surmises, that most of the friendships of to-day are strongly permeated with selfish aims and that cases of the "Damon and Pythias" type are almost as scarce as the proverbial hen's teeth, and he who finds one of them will have to search with as much diligence as did Diogenes in his hunt for an honest man.

There are many agreeable and enjoyable acquaintanceships where one person greatly enjoys the society and fellowship of another, and perhaps greatly admires qualities possessed by that person, and still true friendship may not exist between them. True friendship, one for another, means a willingness to sacrifice much—if need be—for another's benefit and welfare. When you find a fellow mortal who will come forward to your aid and support in a time of need, making sacrifice to help you with no prospect of being repaid, you may count that person as a true friend.

A BROTHER IN CREATION.

RUSSIANS AS CHRISTIANS

Editor AMERICAN:

You and the rest of Mr. Hearst's news papers were a potent factor in forming American public opinion against Russia at the time of the Kishineff massacre. You are again rendering great service to humanity and the cause of religious liberty in attacking the wholesale murder of Christians in Albania. And as one of your many Jewish readers, allow me to express my sincere thanks to you for your noble and humane work.

Jews, like myself, who have had a similar experience in Russia, are perhaps more apt to feel for such examples with the Christians in Turkey.

But I for one cannot agree with your correspondent, who would want Russia to stop those Turkish atrocities by reason of her being a Christian country. Russia, to my mind, is no more Christian in that broad sense which you so ably defined in your editorial—than Turkey. Russia and Turkey is but one modern term for murder, persecution and oppression. Liberal countries like England and our own ought to undertake the task of checking this barbaric slaughter of women and children.

DAVID N. GINZBERG.

The Progressive Democratic League Becomes a Fact

On Wednesday morning the Washington Post published a long cable message from Mr. Hearst in Paris detailing the political circumstances that demand the formation of a Progressive Democratic League to secure the progressiveness of next year's Democratic convention, and, failing that, to secure by other means the election of a progressive national administration.

The AMERICAN notes with gratification the striking fact that, a few hours after the publication of this message, leading Democrats of the Senate and the House met in Washington and organized a movement exactly of the character indicated by Mr. Hearst.

"The Democratic Federation of Precinct Clubs," chartered by Senators Owen, Chamberlain and Myers, Representatives Raker, Buchanan, Sabath, Diefendorfer, Bride and other distinguished Democrats in and out of Congress, promises to do the work that Mr. Hearst described.

"It plans to seize the regular Democratic party organization from precinct to national committee, nominate and elect a Progressive Democrat as President of the United States and to control the government of the United States from turret to foundation stones by a patriotic, self-governing, self-supporting organization of Progressive Democrats, pledged to honest government and to the establishment of the fundamental doctrines of democracy."

These are the words of Senator Owen. He adds to them other generous words acknowledging the value of Mr. Hearst's initiative in the new movement now set afoot: "William Randolph Hearst has been advocating the essential principles of democracy for years and I rejoice to know his magnificent papers will continue to stand for these doctrines. He has done a great work in promoting genuine progress, and deserves the appreciation of all who stand for honest and efficient government."

An Easy Way to Help the World Along Is to Protect the Birds from Slaughter

Copyright, 1911, by the National News Association

THERE are thousands of kind hearted, good women, living in cities and villages and country places, who sigh because they have not the means or the power to do more good for humanity.

They wish they had influence, and position, and riches, not for their own gratification, but that they might make the world better. Yet, it is safe to assert that ninety-eight out of every hundred of these women are trimming their hats with slaughtered birds, or the feathers of slaughtered birds.

The disaster to the country, to the world in general, through this reprehensible vanity of women, vanity which has no excuse, cannot be realized until the subject is investigated.

Here are some FACTS given by E. F. Felt, New York, State entomologist. He makes a plea for the protection of birds for several reasons.

First—Because it is humane and our duty to do so.

Second—Because in their relation to insects they are necessary for man's actual existence on the earth.

Third—Because failure to protect them involves enormous financial loss.

Recent extensive outbreaks of all-an caterpillars are significant, if correctly interpreted. The forest tent caterpillar, during the latter part of the last century and the early portion of this, was present in countless hordes in the woodlands, stripping the leaves from trees covering large areas. Two other pests were equally abundant though in more restricted areas during the Summer of 1907. These extensive injuries by insects appear to be increasing in number, and the cause therefor may be found in the wanton destruction of bird life. Dr. William T. Hornaday, of the New York Zoological Society, recently estimated that there had been a decrease of about forty-eight per cent. in the number of our native birds during the past fifteen years. The great importance of birds as nature's checks is strikingly emphasized by English history. Mr. E. H. Forbush in his recent work on "Useful Birds and Their Protection" gives several cases of the unprecedented abundance of mice, moles and various insects resulting from the destruction of birds. The authenticity of several of these records cannot be questioned.

Birds, because of their unrivalled powers of locomotion, are peculiarly adapted to suppressing unusual outbreaks of insects and other pests. There are on record a number of instances where birds have swarmed to feed upon hosts of destructive insects, such as sea gulls descending by the thousands upon the Utah wheat fields infested by millions of black crickets in 1848. Locust outbreaks are frequently attended by unusual numbers of birds, ranging from the tiny kinglet to the great whooping crane, and including dainty birds like the great blue heron, flesh eaters like hawks and owls, and shore birds such as ducks, geese and gulls, all uniting in destroying the swarms of pernicious insects. More recently the outbreaks by the forest tent caterpillar, alluded to above, have been attended by unusual numbers of birds, some of feeding so ravenously upon the caterpillars as to be almost oblivious of the watcher's presence.

The total annual loss has been estimated at $800,000,000, and it is probably in excess of even this gigantic figure. The salaries Hessian fly caused the farmers of New York State an estimated loss of $3,000,000 only a few years ago, and it is calculated that the codling moth or apple worm lays an equally heavy tribute annually upon our fruit growers. The experience of Mr. E. H. Forbush, ornithologist to the State Board of Agriculture of Massachusetts, shows that it is possible by judicious provision to attract to orchards such a number of native birds as to control dangerous outbreaks of insects. The adequate protection of birds throughout our country should result, we believe in greatly mitigating the enormous losses inflicted by insect pests. Economic, if not aesthetic considerations, should lead all truly patriotic citizens to do everything within their power to provide adequate protection for our birds.

Now, with such knowledge placed before us, why do women continue to be the most potent power in the destruction of our beautiful birds? How can any woman, who pretends to care for animals, or who has any regard for the preservation of our forests, or any real desire to uplift humanity, be indifferent to the millinery question?

How can she allow her vanity to overcome her good sense, her kindliness of heart and her reason?

There is not the slightest need for the use of any portion of slaughtered birds in the creation of a beautiful and modish hat.

In a season where feathers and corpses of birds were the rage in millinery, a modish woman, who is recognized as a perfect dresser, wore an exquisite creation, in the latest design, but it was garnished only with chiffon and flowers; and was far more admired than the feather monstrosities of her rivals.

The most beautiful hat the writer ever saw was composed wholly of moss, with one purple orchid at the side; and there are innumerable methods of combining ribbon, lace, flowers, chiffon, silks and velvets to produce becoming results.

Every woman who takes the stand that she will not wear dead birds or the plumage of birds slaughtered for millinery purposes is helping to make the world more beautiful and the race better.

Let each woman who reads these lines try the experiment of thinking up pleasing effects in hats without feathers, hats which shall not add to the havoc now going on among our wild birds.

Ostrich plumes do not mean the death of a bird, any more than woolen garments mean the killing of sheep. But birds of Paradise, aigrettes and boasts of beautiful plumage DO mean wanton slaughter, and no woman can call herself a good woman who is indifferent to this fact.

Here are a few things which women who are anxious to protect birds and consequently our forests can do to aid in the work:

Do not shoot them or permit them to be stoned or frightened.

Erect nesting boxes. In these six or more species may nest.

Prohibit unusual noise around the premises during the nesting season, particularly while birds are selecting sites for nests.

Provide nesting material for use in constructing nests.

Put out trays of water and mud for robins, swallows, etc., to use in building.

Erect and preserve old posts, stumps and logs with holes in them.

Discourage the manufacture, sale and use of air guns, sling shots, etc.

Do not use for ornamentation, wearing or otherwise, the feathers or parts of birds that are killed solely for that purpose.

Organize nature-study societies for the study and preservation of birds.
